UNEEDIT GAS IRONS

$2.50

At this price one of these irons is an exceptional bargain. The usual price of a gas iron is at least $3.50.

The iron consumes about 65 per cent Air and 35 per cent Gas and is guaranteed to burn only one cent's worth of gas in 5 hours.

Instead of having the usual rubber attachment which easily and quickly deteriorates, the hose is made of flexible iron.

This iron needs no wax.

Four $1,000 stake races will be the features of the speed program at the Green county fair to be held in Monroe on Sept. 10-14. There are few county fairs anywhere that can boast of an array such as this together with a number of purse races that will bring the total amount of prize money to $40,500.

For free attractions, the fair management has arranged for two aeroplanes which will compete in races, altitude climbing, and other stunts never before seen in this part of the country.

All the buildings on the fair grounds have been painted and the grounds in general cleaned up, although it is over three weeks until the big Green county show.

The noted half-mile track is being put in condition for the speed events. It is expected that some fast time will be made as a number of horses have been entered in the 2:11 pace that have marks of 2:10 and less. Three of the entries have records of 2:07 1/2.

The Green county fair premium list pamphlet has been published and copies may be obtained by writing or calling on the secretary, M. E. Baltzer.

HAVE ORGANIZED A NEW STOCK COMPANY

Heon Electric Reminder Company
Will Perfect Organization This Evening.

Janesville is to have a new industry added to its many factories within the next few weeks in the Heon Electric Reminder Company which holds its first meeting to perfect its organization this evening. The inventor and holder of the patent, Charles Heon, is well known to Janesville people and the traveling public, having been behind the desk at the Myers hotel for many years, later conducting a hotel in Green Bay and having been employed in Milwaukee and at Portage Hotels. Mr. Heon has been working upon his model for several years and has it now perfected. It is for use in hotels, garages, business offices, where time appointments are vital, sleeping cars and even in other business places. It is most simple in its arrangement and has no complicated mechanism to get out of order and requires the services of an expert to adjust. The company will incorporate at once for ten thousand dollars under the name "Heon Electric Reminder Company." The stockholders at present are: J. M. Bond, G. V. Squibbs, William McNeil, Charles Pierce, Charles Heon, Louis Avery and Mr. Bradley. The new company has several locations for their factory in view and will start work as soon as their incorporation is complete. The cost of the only similar contrivance is in the neighborhood of a hundred and fifty dollars while this clock machine can be manufactured and sold for some fifty cents. Mr. Heon will take active charge of the factory and the sales department for the present.

The clocks can be made in sixteen inch square sizes or eight inch square. They can be set at the desired hour and minute twelve hours in advance and there is no complicated mechanism connected with it. The clock portions are all of the best manufactured and the company at first will merely assemble the various parts here.

"THE GREAT DIVIDE" OPENS 1913 SEASON

Manager Myers Secures Delightful
Attraction for Opening of Theatrical Season.

The tale of the Great Divide has been presented so often that it is familiar to almost everyone. Suffice to say that the company which produced this masterpiece of stage art at the opening of the theatrical season of the Myers theatre for 1913 and 1914 was most excellent. C. S. Primrose, who is a theatrical producer of considerable prominence, had engaged a company of first class ability, secured good scenery and excellent stage effects to present this high class western drama. The lines were well read, the climax aided by good stage settings and the performance went off without a hitch. In spite of the fact it is a company that is just starting on this season's road work, Mr. Graceland as Stephen Ghent, proved most acceptable. Miss Esmond as Ruth Jordan, portrayed her difficult part with spirit that showed most careful training and the rest of the cast was well balanced. The two opening acts are laid in the Arizona country, one in a cabin of a settler and the second in the mountain peaks of the Catalina mountains at Ghent's home. The last act is laid in the comfortable home of Ruth's mother in the cultured east. It is a stage tale, one that starts with a shock, a fight, a tumble and ends up with true love the conqueror. The production has appeared in Janesville many times since its original success in New York and each time has drawn good houses. The Primrose company production is one of the best that have appeared in the road in several seasons.

MANY AUTOMOBILE PARTIES PASS THROUGH CITY SUNDAY

Janesville proves to be a popular place for automobile tourists for every Sunday at least five parties stop off here while on their tour of the state. The Della, at Kilbourn, Wisconsin, attracts many of the motorists and every Saturday and Sunday many Chicago people motor to Kilbourn by way of Janesville. On Sunday following parties were reported: Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Darnell, Mr. Darnell being the deputy grand master of the Masonic lodge of the state of Illinois and daughter, Mrs. Darnell and Leo Chapina, of McLean, Illinois, were on their way to the northern section of the state. Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Lairy and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were in the city overnight on the way from Lafayette, Indiana, to Devils Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ruschke and Miss Bessie Boggs of La Fayette, Indiana, stopped off in Janesville for the night on their way to Lake Geneva, where they will remain during the remainder of the summer months. Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Hallenborg and daughter, Lottie, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor of Roselle, Indiana, passed through the city early Sunday morning from Chicago, and were on their way to St. Paul. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Brown and son, Thomas, Jr., passed through Janesville on their way from Sioux Falls, South Dakota, to Chicago.

CHEESEMAN NOT EMPLOYED BY BUOCH BREWING COMPANY

Through an unfortunate error it was stated in Saturday evening's Gazette that James Cheeseaman, arrested for an alleged attack upon the Tift residence last Friday evening, was in the employ of the Buoch Brewing Company when one of the Tift sons made the complaint against that concern of selling liquor on Sunday some time ago, according to Mr. Buckenridge, one of the new owners of the establishment. The brewery until August 5th and was not employed last Friday evening when the alleged attack was made, by the company, having left their employ previous to that date.

She Likes American Men.
This from Lily Lena, the English comedienne, who finds in America something which she envies us—our men.

"American men are the neatest dressers in the world and their clothes fit. They are not silly in their attentions to women, but they are always courteous. They work hard and play well and pay their wives' bills, and they're fair enough to hear a woman's side of an argument and consider its value."

"The dear old souls are doing great things every day and making other nations sit up in astonishment."

"American wives, sweethearts and daughters should be proud of their men. They are the kings of the earth and their greatness is as yet unmeasured. Most visitors to this country rave about your women. I believe they are nice, but the men—well, if American women could travel about the world more and make a few observations I think the stability of homes in America would be infinitely increased and the divorce judges could sleep late in the mornings."

Voice of Conscience.
A western Kentucky negro was in jail awaiting trial for stealing a calf. His wife called to see him. On her way out the jailer, whose name was Grady, halted her.
"Mandy," he inquired, "have you got a lawyer yet for Jim?"
"Naw, sah," said the wife. "Ef Jim was guilty I'd git him a lawyer right away; but he tells me he ain't guilty, and sq. of co'se, I ain't aimin' to hire none."
"Mr. Grady," came a voice from the cells above, "you tell dat nigger woman down that to git a lawyer—and git a good one, too!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Advice to a Friend.
The young man was about to be married.
"Praise your wife's grace and beauty constantly," advised one friend.
"But don't overdo it," counseled another. "She may conclude that she has thrown herself away on you, and want to go on the stage."

SPOKE YESTERDAY AT LOCAL MEETINGS

Rev. James W. McDaniels of The Enterprise Institute, Chicago, Speaks in Favor of Black Race.

Rev. James W. McDaniels, financial agent for the Enterprise Industrial Institute, a negro school in Chicago, for the boys and girls of the black race, is in the city, and expects to be here for several days.

Yesterday he spoke at various meetings throughout the city, and his account of the school, and the work was of interest to many. In the course of the day he spoke at the Methodist Sunday school, the meeting at the link auditorium in the afternoon, and at the Norwegian church in the evening.

Rev. McDaniels is here in the interest of the financial backing of the school, and he swore to an affidavit before City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund today.

This school in Chicago has an enrollment of about two hundred students, all of who are taking up various trades. Situated not far from the business district in Chicago, it has larger advantages than other institutions founded for the same purpose.

Rev. McDaniels has been with the school for many years and has done much to place this institution on the same principles which have made the famous Booker T. Washington schools famous.

The negro has been in this country for nearly three hundred years, Mr. McDaniels continued, and their advancement has been short of marvelous during the past few years. The purpose of the school is to put as many negro boys and girls out into the business world as possible, and to educate them both in trade, and in religion. The school has no endowment but depends upon the public as to its upkeep.

Close Finishes Featured Janesville Race Meeting.

Although the Janesville race meet is over and gone there are many things which will be recalled again and again by the horsemen who competed for the prizes as well as by the track fans who enjoyed the excellent cards offered on the three days.

It is safe to say that the claim which Janesville has made of owning the fastest and best tracks in the northwest has been firmly established. Several of the horsemen who have had experience on the best courses of the country, were found in their praises of the local tracks which were in shape for races on Thursday in spite of the heavy drenching they were given by the rain of the early morning.

The recent meeting made the opening of the Wisconsin grand circuit which promises to be one of the big racing associations of the country. For five or six weeks there will be various meetings held on the circuit and next year will undoubtedly see new towns added to the list of members and a longer season in consequence. Evansville is the second meeting place, then Beloit and later Monroe, Jefferson and Madison will have attractive cards with most of the horses entered here on the program.

There were a lot of close heats on the local tracks last week. It would have kept the camera busy to get them all and on Wednesday it would have been impossible to get results on account of the poor light. Thursday was an ideal day and the Gazette was fortunate in securing the accompanying illustrations of three exciting races and of three of the fastest horses entered. It is to be regretted that there was no one on hand to get a photograph of the finish in the first heat of the 2:30 trot on Friday, as it is seldom that such a wonderful finish is seen on race tracks anywhere. However, the Gazette is glad to submit the pictures here published for the approval of the public.

SPORT Snap-Shots

The outcome of the wrangle in Chicago over the writing of sport news seems to be that Charley Comiskey, the owner of the White Sox, would prefer the plain unadorned king's English while professors at the University of Chicago are heartily in favor of the slang. A rather unusual and surprising development. One would naturally suppose that the professor persons would lean toward the legitimate diction and that a baseball owner would be somewhat in favor of the slang. Professor Nathaniel Butler of the University declares that it would make the sport page pretty tame reading without a little slang and some of the idiomatic expressions and that the language of the sport writer is a brand of humor that any paper would sorely miss.

"Of course we want the picturesque in the reports, although the writer fails in his functions when he is so extremely funny that the reader is not able to understand him," says Butler. "Too much slang, of course, is not to be desired. However, it would be folly to do away with all of it." Comiskey can't seem to see the thing that way at all. He's entirely again the slang phase of it. "What the readers want to know is who won and how. When these salient facts are couched in a lot of incoherent circumlocution he reads on the paper in disgust." The reader is invited to line up on either side of the question he may care to. Altho we're in favor of the p'essor's.

It's a funny thing but it seems that perfect eyesight is not essential to the making of a star tennis player. At least the young man who wears glasses has an excellent chance to star at the racquet game. Recently it was noticed in the Michigan singles championship games that a big percentage of the players wore specs and of the four in the semi-finals three were spectacled. Nat Hundley was the only one who appeared without the panes of glass in his face. And he was beaten by Green who wore glasses. The challenge round between Groen and Chuck Benton of Cleveland, was interrupted continually that the contestants might wipe their spectacles. And when Benton finally won out every one noted that the lenses of his specs were much bigger than those of his opponent. Which of course must have accounted for his victory. Young man, if you would star at the tennis game wear spectacles.

Recent events have brought grief to several fight managers, and it now comes to light that only a few in the business are wearing diamonds. One manager who is feeling the pinch of poverty is Tommy Walsh, who in less than three months has seen the downfall of three of his fortune builders—Frankie Burns, Frankie Russell and Joe Mandot. Dan Morgan, too, is up against it, since Kayo Brown blew. Dan still has Jack Britton on his hands, but the promoters do not seem to be rushing madly after Jack's services. When Tom Jones lost Ad Wolgast, he quickly turned to Jess Willard. Now Jess

CARDINALS DEFEAT FOOTVILLE SOX IN SLAMFEST CONTEST

Steady Infield Work and Heavy Slugging Brings Victory to Cards, 8 to 6—Crandall Lacks Usual Speed.

Twelve good clean hits, mixed in with five bases and some daring base running, gave the Janesville Cardinals the victory over the crack Footville White Sox Sunday afternoon at the Driving Park by an 8 to 6 score. Tiltie, who was billed to twirl for the visitors, was unable to perform and Munson pitched for the Evansville nine, was on the firing line for Sox. Hall, of Janesville, was Munson's batter mate in the absence of Silverthorn, the crack backstop of the Footville team. This combination proved easy for the Cards in the fourth inning, four clean hits and a free pass to first, scored four runs and spilled the beans for Footville. Crandall did the serving for the Cards and it was easy to see that he was not in his prime, for he had an idea they could pilfer second by three foot every time.

In the first inning the Sox gained access to the score column when Crandall pitched four balls to Langdon and Fraser and Hall came through with safe drives, scoring Langdon. This was the first sign of Crandall not being right.

Munson pitched to four Janesville men in their half of the first and the infield took care of two of them. In the fourth, with the heavy end of the batting order up, Captain Hell or dered out the reserves and the war clubs began to show signs of smoke. Hell slapped one down through short and Butters looked over four wide ones and advanced Hell to second. Burger came through with the necessary walk and Hell tied the score. Munson began to show signs of weakening and walked. Nehr and Crandall completed the riot act with a drive that sent two runs across.

Footville made it four all in the half of the fifth when a two bagger by Munson and a single by E. Fraser again delivered with a run-getting hit. Hall was up with two on, but Crandall grooved the ball with plenty of smoke and the batter failed to connect.

Just to make matters interesting the Cards jumped on Munson and slammed his flippers to tall grass of the outer garden. Porter, Kell and Butters slammed the visitors' defense and when Crandall showed through with a safe drive, three markers had crossed the rubber. Footville was engaged in the eighth when a question-run and four hits only netted them one score. In the ninth they again pushed across a score, but they were two short from copping the bacon. In the Janesville half of the eighth a sparkling double play kept the Cards a safe distance for the run column. The largest crowd of the year was present at the game and were well satisfied as both teams played good ball and the contest was free from bad errors and was bitterly fought owing to great rivalry between the teams. The Janesville infield came through without a boot and pulled off some nice pick-ups that were nothing short of sensational. Hell was the leading performer as he grabbed five assists and two put outs and never faltered. If Tiltie had been on the mound, it would have been a better game as Munson was far superior to the pride of Albany.

Summary.
Cardinals—Wilson, c; Crandall, p; Hell, ss; Porter, 1b; Butters, 2b; Ryan, 3b; Sullivan, rf; Nehr, cf; and Burger, lf.
Footville White Sox—Hall, c; Munson, p; Owens, ss; E. Fraser, 1b; Parkers, 2b; Morrison, 3b; Langdon, Clarke and J. Fraser, fielders.
Innings—Fleming and Clarke, 1. Hits—Off Munson, 3; Crandall, 10. Passed by pitcher—Crandall, 3; by Munson, 3.

Two base hits—Munson and Burger. Stole second—Ryan, running for Porter, and Hell.

Around the Circuit.
The diamond was not in perfect shape as the rain during the night had left a rough spot on one side of the slabman's box but this did not interfere with the shortstops grabbing everything that came their way.

In the eighth inning when Fleming called E. Fraser out when he slid home on an infield play, the Footville bunch got very prepped and threatened dire things to Fleming. The play looked questionable as the runner slid around Wilson and it looked as though he had the base, but Fleming held his ground and ordered the Footville players off the field when they had done so much heeling. The Footville ump evened the next inning when he called Hell out on an infield grounder, when Fraser, number two, had his foot a mile off the bag. The Cards didn't beat about it.

Nehr was the walking kid yesterday for Munson could not put the ball over to him and three times he got his berth to first free of charge. E. Fraser, first baseman for the Sox, was the star of the game for he nicked Crandall for three hits in five times to bat and smothered every throw from his team mates and some of them looked good for the error column.

Munson had very little on the pill and it is a wonder that the Cards did not drive him from the slab during the game. His floating barn door out had some of the Cards swinging.

There was great comment going on in the grandstand about the whip of Joe Ryan. It is certain he can peg the ball across the diamond like a bullet and it seldom misses its mark. He is full of pep and has got just a little too much of it at bat for yesterday he tried to demolish the hay stack and fanned twice.

The Cards have scheduled a game with the Sox at Footville. Another game is being arranged with the Beloit Moose as the locals are still confident they carry enough guns to down the Helioiters. Hunting season is open next month and a nice pair of antlers would look nice in the Cardinal record.

CARDINALS DEFEAT FOOTVILLE SOX IN SLAMFEST CONTEST

Steady Infield Work and Heavy Slugging Brings Victory to Cards, 8 to 6—Crandall Lacks Usual Speed.

Twelve good clean hits, mixed in with five bases and some daring base running, gave the Janesville Cardinals the victory over the crack Footville White Sox Sunday afternoon at the Driving Park by an 8 to 6 score. Tiltie, who was billed to twirl for the visitors, was unable to perform and Munson pitched for the Evansville nine, was on the firing line for Sox. Hall, of Janesville, was Munson's batter mate in the absence of Silverthorn, the crack backstop of the Footville team. This combination proved easy for the Cards in the fourth inning, four clean hits and a free pass to first, scored four runs and spilled the beans for Footville. Crandall did the serving for the Cards and it was easy to see that he was not in his prime, for he had an idea they could pilfer second by three foot every time.

In the first inning the Sox gained access to the score column when Crandall pitched four balls to Langdon and Fraser and Hall came through with safe drives, scoring Langdon. This was the first sign of Crandall not being right.

Munson pitched to four Janesville men in their half of the first and the infield took care of two of them. In the fourth, with the heavy end of the batting order up, Captain Hell or dered out the reserves and the war clubs began to show signs of smoke. Hell slapped one down through short and Butters looked over four wide ones and advanced Hell to second. Burger came through with the necessary walk and Hell tied the score. Munson began to show signs of weakening and walked. Nehr and Crandall completed the riot act with a drive that sent two runs across.

Footville made it four all in the half of the fifth when a two bagger by Munson and a single by E. Fraser again delivered with a run-getting hit. Hall was up with two on, but Crandall grooved the ball with plenty of smoke and the batter failed to connect.

Just to make matters interesting the Cards jumped on Munson and slammed his flippers to tall grass of the outer garden. Porter, Kell and Butters slammed the visitors' defense and when Crandall showed through with a safe drive, three markers had crossed the rubber. Footville was engaged in the eighth when a question-run and four hits only netted them one score. In the ninth they again pushed across a score, but they were two short from copping the bacon. In the Janesville half of the eighth a sparkling double play kept the Cards a safe distance for the run column. The largest crowd of the year was present at the game and were well satisfied as both teams played good ball and the contest was free from bad errors and was bitterly fought owing to great rivalry between the teams. The Janesville infield came through without a boot and pulled off some nice pick-ups that were nothing short of sensational. Hell was the leading performer as he grabbed five assists and two put outs and never faltered. If Tiltie had been on the mound, it would have been a better game as Munson was far superior to the pride of Albany.

THE EUGENICS LAW.

Wisconsin and Pennsylvania are two states which are receiving much attention just at present by medical men and scientists throughout the civilized world, owing to the passage of the so-called "Eugenics Marriage Laws." Even an archbishop of the Catholic church saw fit to deplore the necessity for such laws, at a recent meeting of church dignitaries. At the gathering of medical men in London the question of such marriage laws was discussed and now comes a dispatch from Denver throwing a new light on the subject under discussion. According to the dispatches if such a law as that recently passed in Wisconsin forbidding the marriage of diseased persons and compelling the sterilization of defectives had always been enforced, three-fourths of the world's greatest geniuses would never have been born.

This was the opinion expressed by Dr. Paul S. Hunter, secretary of the Colorado state board of health, as an answer to the statement of Surgeon General Hines in which the surgeon declared that this country must stem the propagation of defectives and that the Wisconsin law is the correct answer. Dr. Hunter declares that love will laugh at laws just as he has laughed at locksmiths. Dr. Hunter's statement:

"Theoretically I am heartily in favor of prohibiting the marriage of all men and women who can not show a clean bill of health, but it does not work out in practice," said Dr. Hunter. "The strongest parents bring forth puny children; the most moral produce immoral offspring. The old joke about the 'minister's son' is founded on history."

"On the other hand, many of the weakest fathers and mothers, while transferring their weaknesses such as drunkenness, insanity, perversion and all the traits Surgeon General Hines says would be eliminated by law, also pass on the 'divine spark' that has lighted the path of progress since time began.

"Wagner, Dean Swift and Charles Lamb were insane; Keats and Robert Louis Stevenson died of inherited tuberculosis; Coleridge and De Quincey were opium fiends; Pope was a dwarf and Herbert Spencer was an invalid; Edgar Allan Poe was mentally unbalanced and an inveterate user of drugs and drink; Goldsmith was called 'the inspired idiot'; Rousseau and Oscar Wilde were moral and mental perverts of the lowest order. Shakespeare was highly immoral in that he had an illegitimate daughter. It is hardly necessary to refer to Byron and Robert Burns, for their drunkenness and the open immorality of Byron are too well known."

JOHN WESLEY SALE.

News of the death of John Wesley Sale, for twenty-seven years judge of the probate court of Rock county, will come as a shock to his myriads of friends throughout the county. No man has ever endeared himself to the people as has become a part of their life, as has the departed jurist. Judge Sale's death is a loss to the county, to the city of Janesville, to the bar of the state. Long has he served the county's interests well and faithfully. His determination not to again seek the office he has so long honored, was received with sincere regret. As a citizen of Janesville, he has had its best interests at heart. He has served as its city attorney, as an alderman during strenuous days. Always active in city affairs he will be sadly missed when times of necessity arise. He was a true friend, a wise counsellor and thousands will mourn his loss as a personal grief.

THAW'S ESCAPE.

Harry Thaw and his millions have at last opened the doors of the asylum where he was committed after his sensational trial for the murder of Stanford White. Thaw is at liberty and perhaps this is a solution of the complex case which will be accepted by New York state officials with relief. At any rate it shows how money may be used to side-track justice if there is sufficient funds behind the accused.

A youth, dumb ten years, became so excited over a cricket match that his speech was restored. What would have happened to him if he had seen the best slugger on the home team line out a home run with three men on the bases?

Perhaps Ambassador Gerard, who forces trouble in trying to make his $17,500 salary cover a $19,000 rent bill in Berlin, can induce the Kaiser to loan him one of his fifty-seven palaces.

Texas friends of Mr. Bryan offer to raise money to send him to jail for having to keep off the Chautauqua circuit. And the worst part of it for Mr. Bryan is that they seem to be in earnest.

The Weather

Old Hiram Purdy does allow That he saw his old brindle cow Rub up agin' the barnyard fence And lion gaze at the moon. He says that ten times out of nine This is a sure and certain sign, A spell of rainy weather is a comin' mighty soon.

Old Grandma Tabbs desires to state Her hens are a'quid queer of late. They don't seem pleased about their food and all refuse to lay. She's willin' to put up a bet. By gum, she's never missed it yet. A spell of dry, hot weather is sure headed right our way.

There's nothing that you cannot hear At almost any time of year About the weather from the folks who sit and twiddle their thumbs. It's rarely that they can agree And so it's very plain to see The best plan is to simply take the weather as it comes.

The Diary of the Bonthead. In the olden days when a man couldn't find anything else in the world to do, he went into the life insurance business. Now he either goes into the life insurance business or he sells vacuum cleaners, with the odds in favor of the cleaners. When vacuum cleaners first became rampant in this country about five years ago, my wife thought that the world would be filled by microbes within five minutes if we didn't have a vacuum cleaner. This in spite of the fact that we had used an old-fashioned broom in our house ever since we had been married. The vacuum cleaner men and the microbes apparently work hand in hand, advertising each other, like the breakfast food and the actress who recommends it. We bought a vacuum cleaner and we have bought about one a month ever since. Every man who came along with a vacuum cleaner had a little better vacuum cleaner than the man who had preceded him. It seemed to be arranged that way. A man with a poorer vacuum cleaner never came along after a man with a better one.

Every vacuum cleaner had some little gewblike attachment that made it about two per cent more efficient than the preceding one. Judging by the improvement in vacuum cleaners since we purchased our first one, that first one could not have caught more than one microbe out of ten thousand.

Nothing goes out of style quicker than a vacuum cleaner unless it is a silk hat or an automobile. The first one we had worked with a handle like a suction pump and with good training could go over the floor of a small room in one day without breaking his back. You held the cleaner with one hand and pulled with the other and coaxing the microbes out of a six-by-eight rug was a process which occupied an entire day.

Then they got the electric vacuum cleaners. We didn't have any electric lights in the house at that time but had them put in just so we could operate an electric vacuum cleaner.

Nobody in the world was going to have anything on us in the way of cleaners.

After filling the cellar, the barn and the garage with vacuum cleaners that were a week or two behind the times, we swore off and we didn't buy a vacuum cleaner for two months.

Yesterday a man came along with a new vacuum cleaner that would pull the ticks out a carpet or would yank the paper off the wall. It would pull a mustard plaster off from a man's back. When placed at one end of the room, it would tear out a plate glass window in the other end of the room. It cleaned up all of the known microbes and, as it was working only half capacity while so doing, they had invented three or four thousand microbes that had never been heard of before, just to keep the vacuum cleaner busy. In other words, when they began working the new vacuum cleaner, it had pulled in microbes that the scientists had never had the nerve to discover, so tremendous was its strength.

We put a mortgage on the house and bought one.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THIS IS THE GOLDEN AGE.

My neighbor says the world is growing worse.

My neighbor is a pessimist and is much like the old woman who always felt bad when she felt good, for fear she might feel bad?

"Why," he says—

"Look at the rottenness in politics and at the outflow of predatory wealth, and the abuses and injustices of our time."

"Do you know," he continues, "there is big graft in business? Why a salesman can't sell a purchasing agent $50 worth of goods without the latter asking, 'What is there in it for me?'"

There is some truth in what my neighbor says.

And pity 'tis, 'tis true. But it is not the whole truth.

On the contrary, corruption is the exception of which honesty is the rule. Rascals are really scarce. And all men are not money mad.

You know some of us are like the old prophet's servant who thought all decent people were dead—except the prophet and himself. We need to have our eyes opened to see the mighty host of those who have not bowed the knee to Baal.

Who are they?

The teachers, who, for a meagre wage, sacrifice their vitality to educate the race.

The preachers, thousands of whom live on a pittance, that they may help men up spiritually.

The workers in the laboratories who watch while others sleep and make discoveries that lessen pain, or save a child, or prolong a life.

Artisans and artists, humanitarians and philanthropists who, in every place, care more for men than money.

Why, time and space would fail me to tell of the hospitals and homes for the friendless and free libraries and associated charities and free clubs and playgrounds for tenement children, and the countless, gracious agencies of this humane age. Never before in all history was so much being done for our race.

And, best of all—

The mass of our people are sound in head and heart. They are no less honest or brave or true or helpful than their fathers, but in some respects more so.

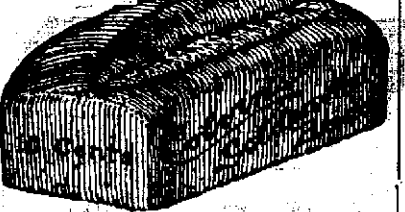

And so I say to my neighbor—

"Cheer up. This is the best age the world has seen—and getting better."

Heaven as a State of Mind.

The kingdom of heaven is not a place, but a state of mind—John Burroughs.

State Versus Frank L. Stevens and State Versus Cheeseman and Taylor Do Not Come to Trial.

Because of the absence of District Attorney Dunwiddie from the city, two cases set for trial this morning in the municipal court were adjourned to next Friday.

The case of the state versus Frank L. Stevens for one week and the action of the state versus James Cheeseman and Matthew Taylor until ten o'clock Wednesday morning. Attorney John L. Fisher this morning appeared for Cheeseman and on his motion Judge Fife reduced the bail requirements for the defendants from $600 to $250. Bail was then provided for Cheeseman by relatives and he was released. Taylor was unable to secure any and was remanded to jail. Cheeseman and Taylor were placed under arrest Friday night charged with malicious injury to property belonging to Mrs. Frank Tiff. L. & Co. at 1014 Sharon street. Both pleaded not guilty when arraigned Saturday morning. Stevens is charged with making an assault upon Mrs. Mary Williams.

George Sullivan and Walter Walker pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication before Judge Fife this morning. Walker could not pay a fine of $5 and costs, and was committed to jail for eight days. Sullivan wanted the $5.45 necessary to pay a $3 fine and costs and was awarded a six-day sojourn. Sullivan claims Rochester, N. Y., as his home, and said that he had worked as a laborer in the city for about three years ago. He was placed under arrest at the Northwestern depot yesterday.

JUDGE JOHN W. SALE PASSED AWAY SUNDAY

PROMINENT JURIST AND CITIZEN CALLED TO THE WORLD BEYOND.

AFTER A BRIEF ILLNESS

One of the Most Beloved and Respected Citizens of the County Dies After Brave Struggle.

Judge John Wesley Sale is dead. In thousands of homes in the county this sad news will be repeated many times. Sorrow for the loss, pride in his career and in having had his acquaintance will be mingled. For more than a generation he has presided over the county court and during that time almost every family in the county has come into close contact with his influence. He was loved, respected and revered as a friend, a citizen and a judge.

Perhaps no man has left his mark more prominently upon the history of the community he resided in than has the departed jurist. He has been fearless in the performance of his duty as a citizen, a public official and a man. He made warm friends and admiring enemies. No man was more universally loved. Not only has the county lost a good Judge, Janesville a true citizen but his friends mourn the loss of one whose friendship they prized.

John Wesley Sale, was, to all intents, a Rock County product, having been a resident of the county since he was three months old. He was born on a farm in La Porte county, Ind., June 26, 1840, but his parents moved to Rock County and settled on a farm just west of the city of Evansville, three months after his birth. His father, John F. Sale, died when his son was but four years of age, leaving his young widow with four children being under eleven years.

Judge Sale obtained his education at the district school and the Evansville seminary. After completing his course at the seminary he taught school for five years, and then commenced the study of law in the office of Conger and Hawes at Janesville. After spending a year at office study he came to Janesville, where he was employed by the law firm of Conger and Hawes for five years, and then went to the law department of that school. While at the university, in addition to his law studies, he took several special studies, and while there was, for a time, in the college with the late Hon. Thomas M. Cooley. After graduation he settled in Janesville, forming a partnership with the late Hon. C. G. Williams, which continued until Mr. Williams was elected to Congress. He was married to Mary M. DeBann, March 15, 1870.

When Mr. Williams went to Congress, Judge Sale formed a partnership with the late Hon. John R. Bennett which continued until Mr. Bennett was elected circuit judge and went on the bench. He then formed a partnership with Charles E. Pierce, which continued for about two years, when, upon the death of the late Hon. Amos P. Pritchard in September, 1886, he was appointed by the late Governor Rusk, county judge of Rock County to fill the unexpired term of Judge Pritchard. He was re-elected to the county bench since his appointment, having been, without opposition, elected each four years.

While Mr. Sale was at the bar he served three years as city attorney of Janesville and ten years as district attorney of Rock County. In 1884 he was chosen as one of the congressional district delegates to the Republican National Convention at Chicago, which nominated James G. Blaine as candidate for president.

In August, 1886, he was without solicitation on his part, unanimously nominated by the Republican senatorial convention as their candidate for the state senate, which nomination he accepted, but withdrew as a candidate upon his appointment as county judge. Judge Sale's death was directly due to a severe attack of pneumonia which snatched his vitality. For several days past his death has been imminent and the end was shortly after four Sunday morning when he passed into the sleep that knows no waking. Judge Sale also served the city as clerkman from the first ward for one term, being elected at the time of the assumption of city affairs by the Municipal League several years ago.

To mourn his loss is left his sorrowing widow, his only son, George, having passed to the world beyond many years ago. The funeral will be held at three o'clock Tuesday from his late residence on Wisconsin street, Rev. David Beaton, of the Congregational church, of which denomination Judge Sale was a member, officiating. The interment will be at Oak Hill cemetery. It is especially requested by the immediate family that there be no flowers.

During the hour of the funeral, from three to four, Tuesday, the majority of the stores in the city will close for the entire hour and all will shut their doors and work be suspended while the funeral cortege is passing through the city.

Members of the Rock county bar association held a meeting at the circuit court chambers and arranged for their part in the funeral services. A committee on funeral arrangements composed of Judge C. L. Fife, E. F. Carpenter and W. H. Dougherty was named, and all members of the association will attend the services meeting at the court house at two o'clock tomorrow. A committee to compose memorials to be presented to the circuit and supreme courts, was named and is composed of George G. Sutherland, M. O. Mount, J. C. Reed and W. D. McGowan. All law offices in the county will be closed during the funeral.

The offices at the court house will be closed tomorrow afternoon and all employees will attend the services. An atmosphere of sadness today permeated the entire court house where Judge Sale had been for so many years a familiar figure.

TEMPORARY BRIDGE NEARLY COMPLETED

Workmen Expect to Have it Ready for Use by Tomorrow Noon.—Present Walk to be Taken Up.

Pedestrians will have the use of a temporary bridge across the south side of the present Milwaukee street bridge by tomorrow afternoon. Superintendent Shure of the Gould Construction Company stated this morning that he hoped to have it completed by Tuesday noon and as it is opened to traffic the existing walk will be closed and torn up.

Yesterday a small crew continued at work and drove the remaining piles for the south temporary bridge. The big derrick to the west side will drive piles for a temporary foot bridge on the north side of the old bridge. Practically all of the old decking has been removed, including the stringers, and workmen are preparing to put in the keel for the west abutment of the bridge. Not much progress can be made with this until the derrick is moved back. The second derrick, which will work out from the east bank, is expected to arrive from Davenport within ten days.

Twenty-seven men were at work this morning according to the timekeeper's statement. Little difficulty has been experienced in obtaining labor, although during the hot weather some do not stay very long. The contractors pay their men on the tenth and twenty-fifth days of the month. More engineers are expected here in about a week.

GO TO ROCK ISLAND FOR CONSULTATION

Mayor James A. Fathers and City Engineer C. V. Kerch Left for Rock Island Last Evening.

Mayor James A. Fathers and City Engineer C. V. Kerch left last evening for Rock Island, Illinois, to hold a consultation with Major Charles Keller concerning the plans and construction of the Milwaukee street bridge. They are expected to return this evening. Since the receipt of a letter from Major Keller last Monday that the clearance underneath the eastern approach would have to be increased two feet and two inches to be acceptable to the government, City Engineer Kerch has been engaged in making surveys and drawings, showing what effect the elevation of the bridge, as previously planned, would have on the approaches and the properties that front on them. These were brought to the attention of the United States engineer and the mayor and city engineer were hopeful that some compromise could be arrived at whereby a lesser increase in the clearance of the bridge would prove acceptable.

TO PREFER CHARGES AGAINST ASSISTANT FIRE CHIEF MURPHY

A. G. Metzinger Claims That He Refused to Permit Horse to Be Removed From Burning Barn—Chief's Statement.

Charges of alleged neglect and misconduct, it is said, will be filed against Assistant Fire Chief Murphy by the city board of fire commissioners. The charges are that the assistant chief refused assistance in removing a horse from the burning barn at South River street belonging to Mrs. Robert Courtney. The specific charges made by Metzinger are that the assistant chief refused assistance in removing the horse from the burning barn; that he several times struck him with the lantern, knocking him to his knees and cutting a gash in his head and another in his arm.

According to the account given by Fire Chief Klein, the alarm was turned in about 1:05 o'clock, shortly after the barn was struck by lightning. The chief's auto was the first to arrive, and it was closely followed by the motor fire truck from the east side station and the horse-drawn apparatus.

When the chief left the station he could see the flames flaring up into the sky, showing that the fire was out of control. One line of hose was laid out from a hydrant on the north side from the water-works and another from a plug 150 feet the other side. One of the horses had already been taken out by a neighbor and a stream was directed to the barn at the west end where the other horse was supposed to be.

As soon as it was cool enough he directed Assistant Chief Murphy to go in and see if it was possible to save the animal. He soon reported that the animal was alive but down. Its tail was burned off and it was badly scorched. He did not believe it could be saved. The contents of the barn were instructed to keep a stream playing on that part of the building so as to keep the heat and flames from the horse as much as possible.

Metzinger arrived about twenty minutes after the department came and after Murphy had followed the chief's instructions and attempted to wrest the lantern from his hands. Assistant Chief Murphy did not wish to make a personal statement regarding the dispute.

Mr. Metzinger's story varies widely from that of Chief Klein. He states that lightning struck the south side of the barn at 2:20 o'clock and set fire to the roof and bay upstairs. Clarence Courtney noticed the fire about two minutes later and running from the house entered the burning barn, cracked the door and saw the horse running out of the barn. Metzinger claims that Chief Klein refused to send anyone in for the horse and so did Assistant Chief Murphy.

Metzinger then ran into the barn, followed by Murphy and Charles Klein. He was unable to save the horse because the animal was sitting on its haunches and pulling back. Knutson procured a knife and just as he was about to cut the horse free, Metzinger started to walk out with the lantern. Metzinger then asked for the lantern; some words followed, Metzinger grabbed for the lantern, and then it is alleged Murphy struck him with the lantern several times.

An hour and a half after the fire started someone cut the horse loose from the stall and pulled him out by the tail. He was able to get up and crawl out of the barnyard but was so badly burned and in such great pain that it was necessary to call a policeman to kill him. Mr. Metzinger also states that a cow burned to death without the firemen knowing it was there.

Six hundred dollars is the figure given by Mr. Metzinger as his loss on the contents of the barn, which is entirely covered by insurance. The barn burned is valued at about $600 and there was $300 insurance on it.

MRS. BANKER DIES OF TERRIBLE INJURIES AT MERCY HOSPITAL

ATTEMPTED TO START FIRE WITH OIL WHEN CAN EX- PLODES, INFLECTING FATAL BURNS.

LIVES SEVERAL HOURS

Hurried to Mercy Hospital But Life Was Immediately Despaired of—Son Burned Trying to Save Parent.

Terribly burned from head to foot as the result of an explosion which occurred when she attempted to light the range fire with oil at about 5:30 o'clock this morning, Mrs. Barbara Banker, 307 Home Park avenue died at Mercy hospital at ten minutes after twelve o'clock this afternoon.

Mrs. Banker was alone in the kitchen at the time of the accident but her son Henry, who was in a room upstairs heard the explosion and his mother's cries and hurried down to where she lay. He found her lying on the floor, her head and neck wrapped in a blanket. He was able to extinguish the blaze in a few minutes' time but not before they had done their fatal work.

In the meantime Mrs. M. J. Cunningham and Mr. W. Edden had been summoned by telephone and arrived promptly. At their instructions she was immediately conveyed to Mercy hospital in the ambulance. After undergoing treatment there her pain was greatly lessened but at no time was any hope held out for her recovery.

From what could be learned from the unfortunate woman and deduced from the circumstances, Mrs. Banker had been attempting to light the range with kerosene, but what she thought was gasoline, but was probably gasoline. As she was pouring the oil into the range the can came off allowing a considerable quantity of oil to splash out. Immediately the contents of the can were ignited, an explosion occurred, and the bottom of the can blew out, scattering the burning fluid all over her clothing and also setting fire to the walls and ceiling of the room.

Nearly half an hour's work was required to put out the fire in the room and Henry Banker, who first came to the rescue of his mother, was severely burned. The fire department was not called.

Mrs. Banker was born in New Holstein, Wisconsin, November 9, 1856, and has been a resident of Janesville for twenty-five years. She was twice married; first to August Ehlendorf, and later to Frank Banker. Mr. Banker died about eleven years ago, and Mrs. Ehlendorf many years previous. Four children were born from the first marriage, two of whom are living, they are:

Charles Ehlendorf of this city and Emma Ehlendorf of Beloit. The children by the second marriage are Henry, Frank, William, Harry, Mrs. Lillian Day, all of Janesville. Besides these there are three step-children Charles, Chester and George of Edgerton.

Funeral services will be held at Oak Hill cemetery at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

STRONG APPEAL IS MADE BY BLAKEMAN

AMERICAN COLLEGES FAIL TO HAVE RELIGION, BECAUSE OF DECIDED CONTRAST IN CHRISTIANITY.

PEOPLE ARE BLAMED

Expresses Desire to Have Wisconsin University Connected With a Religious Institution in Near Future.

"Christianity is studied in two ways," declared Rev. E. W. Blakeman, student pastor of the Wisconsin university, in his address at the Methodist church yesterday morning. "In one sense of the word, it is a permanent program for the individual, while on the other hand, it is a changing program for society." "Let us compare society to a blade of grass, as for instance, there is a cross-section to the blade of grass, as well as the perpendicular section. The perpendicular section denotes the individual and that character belonging to the individual. In society, you will note quite the opposite. Study the blade of grass, in these two different lights, and a study which you never quite dreamed of before, confronts you in your astonishment. You may look at the life of the individual, and find him a man of good character, and a man of wisdom. But take him in society, and the fact is that you fall to see him as really is.

"Jesus found man as thinking and willing person, and out of these qualities came his love for things. Following his love, due to his thinking powers, and his willing powers, comes his acting. This fact has been recognized at by everybody, but is not practiced by everybody.

"As a whole, the people of the world have not as yet united. We feel the evolution of things about us, and the relationship between one institution and another, but we do not grasp the cross-section of this idea.

"It is a sad fact to relate, but I must tell you of it, even though it may not sound real. This nation, the United States, is the only nation in the world, which has been a veritable as to give an education throughout our schools and colleges, without religion left out. This fact, alone, accounts for our being divided into these two classes, which I have mentioned before.

"People, why has this change come about? Men have been the same, schools have been the same, philosophy has not changed, as you will remember, it was Plato, who handed down some of the most rigid and most stable philosophy which has stood up to the present time without an error. The answer to this change, is a fact, and not a theory. In the first half of the 19th century, there were nineteen out of the thirty physical inventions and discoveries, and all this was done without religion. Never before has such progress been uncovered. Industry, commerce, and all business institutions, better known as the corporations, have all combined so as to beat the public, and put the entire community under one large haul. An example of this would better illustrate the situation. Let me refer to my grandfather, who used to cure his own meat. Compare that time, when everything was his own, to the present day, with corporations in the full swing. Suppose a piece of meat which would put down from a local merchant, were not pure? What could I do? Could I meet the head of the concern face to face, and settle the matter at once? No, I would have to beat around the bush, and meet the strong corporation perhaps in court, with little chance to win my case. The result of this change, or the reasons causing this radical change, are divided into the following four effects:

(1) Natural outgrowth of the nineteenth century already mentioned, follow a run into the socialistic land.

(2) Rapid growing of inequality as accompanied by a decrease of fraternity.

(3) Vague belief in materialism.

(4) This change caused us to question the old truths as never before.

The second effect is the most important from the business standpoint, because of the noted contrast which stands out. A business man will go to work in the morning, and when his transactions are made, he is torn, and many times knows he is getting the best of his customer. On the other hand, this same business man, is a regular church member, and is a leading factor in church duties, although his business and religion are not combined at all. He is doing two wrong things, instead of being square with his patrons. If a person should ask him why he did this, he would merely answer, 'Business is business, and religion is religion.'

"Ex-President Elliott of Harvard university, states, 'Without religion connected with a business, or commerce, the institution is only four-fifths there. The religion department constitutes one-fifth, and this one-fifth is absolutely lost without this essential need, which the people overlook. I believe Dr. Elliott is right, and I desire to have a Methodist church erected at the Madison campus for the purpose of entering religion more into the minds of the students. Our success last year at the university was remarkable, but we need a church, and I hope that within time, there shall be one there.'

"Let us compare the modern university methods and courses of study to a pyramid, and where the pyramid reaches its apex, and ceases, there is the spot, where religion could and should begin. The fault lies in the fact, that it is the people as a whole, who have failed to see this necessity. Every year, the citizens in the state of Wisconsin, are expending as an appropriation to the state university at Madison, over five and one-half millions of dollars. And with this huge sum, they have neglected the use of religion. People, it is up to you, whether or not you want to expend this huge sum yearly, or not. I am not here to implore of you, but you should see now the necessity of such an idea, which would tend to enlighten our university, and make it better."

BURNS CAUSE DEATH OF BABY AGED THREE

Little Ruby Stone of Milton Junction Sets Clothing on Fire While Playing With a Match.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Milton Junction, Aug. 18.—Little Ruby Stone, the three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Elsie Stone, died at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stone, Sunday evening at eight o'clock. Her death was the result of a severe burn.

The child was left asleep, and it is thought the burns which covered the little body were caused from playing with a match, as a burnt one was found near her. Her screams were heard and she was found in flames which were quickly extinguished. There was no place on the body but what the fire had touched. Dr. Hill was called and did what he could, but she was burned too severely to recover. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community.

The Misses Gertrude and Laura Stone are again on duty at The Banks after a two weeks' vacation.

VETERANS TO MEET IN ANNUAL REUNION

Eighteenth Annual Gathering Will be Held in Janesville, September 10.

The eighteenth annual reunion of the soldiers and sailors of Rock county, under the auspices of the Rock County Soldiers and Sailors' union, will be held in the G. A. R. hall in Janesville on Sept. 10 this year. John Tuller of Evansville is president of the union this year and heads the committee making arrangements for the reunion, which have not been fully completed as yet.

The reunion is one of the big annual events in which local old soldiers take part, and it is expected that a large number from all sections of the country will attend.

Janesville has always been the permanent seat of the annual gathering in the past year, except in the summer of 1910, when the reunion took place at Beloit on the occasion of the dedication of the old war cannon in the city park to the Fourth Wisconsin battery.

JOHNSTOWN MAN HAS A HEAVY FIRE LOSS

Large Barn on Amel Lorkie Farm Struck by Lightning in Sunday Morning Storm.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Johnstown, Aug. 18.—The large barn on the farm of Amel Lorkie was struck by lightning in the early morning and was completely destroyed. It contained some 300 bushels of new barley as they had just finished threshing during the week. No tons of hay, the straw and some other loss to fodder. A new corn binder, a wagon, a manure spreader and drill were also consumed.

A peculiar part of the fire was the fact that only one of the two horses that were standing together in a double stall was killed by the lightning, the other escaping unharmed. The one horse was the only live stock lost.

The loss, although partially covered by insurance, is a heavy one for Mr. Lorkie, as a large part of the season's returns were stored in the barn. The flames were easily confined to the one building as there was little or no wind.

Schlitz in Brown Bottles does not have that disagreeable taste

so often found in beer in light bottles.

We reprint below an extract from an opinion rendered by another famous scientist:

"Bottles of strong glass should be selected. They should never be of colorless glass, inasmuch as through the influence of light the beer will not only take on a disagreeable odor and taste, but will also become turbid." (Lintner.)

Extract from Die Malz und Bierbereitung, Published by E. Leyer, Director of the Technical Academy in Augsburg, Tenth Edition, Stuttgart, 1900, page 680.

This is one of the authorities quoted by Dr. Robert Wahl, President of the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology, to corroborate his own opinion.

Schlitz is made pure and the Brown Bottle keeps it pure from the brewery to your glass.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

MATCHES.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

The match is a small one-legged explosive which can be carried in the vest pocket for years without igniting the wearer of the vest, but which in the hands of a small boy with a corn-silk cigar, it becomes as dangerous as a bonfire in a dynamite factory.

It is a very insignificant, insignificant object, but is really of more value to the human race than the electric egg beater, or the reversible pancake skillet.

Matches are made of a low grade of sulphur and a high grade of hope, and can usually be lighted easily after the fourth attempt. They are so constructed that when they are struck on anything but a soft surface, a blue serge trousers they will leave a long, ragged footprint, which causes every several hair in the head of a neat housewife to stand erect. If you enter a house in which none of these footprints is discernible, you can tell at once who wears the pants in that home. Many a man has started out in married life by striking matches on the sidewalk and a white enameled plate rail, only to be greeted by a proud-spirited wife, until he couldn't light his pipe without getting out of his chair and hitching one leg toward the ceiling.

The safety match is a recent invention which is designed to protect the American home and the overhanging mustache. It comes in a box which is always upside down when you are in a hurry, and is ignited by being struck in the face by the box. The life of the average safety match is one-sixteenth part of a second, and if a man is as agile it won't take over twelve of them to light a cigar. These matches are furnished free by the sleeping car companies, so that patrons will not scratch their initials on the rosewood surroundings.

Matches are borrowed more often than anything else except trouble. The only time a man is out of matches is when he is on a fishing or hunting trip, when he is obliged to light one cigar from the other until all he can see is a giddy procession of shooting stars.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams

BY WALT MASON

To do things right, with all your might—that is a godly motto; I've pasted that inside my hat, and if you don't you'd ought to. To do things right, as reads your light, with faith and not adding to do your best and let the rest to Joricho go sliding!

With such DOING THINGS RIGHT, an aim the game and see your fortune founded; and goodly deed beats all creed that ever man expounded. To do things right, to bravely fight, when fate cuts up unfairly, to pay your way from day to day, and treat your neighbor square. That doctrine fills all wants and stills the doubter's quins and terrors, and guides him straight at goodly gain through all the field of errors. To do your best, with in your breast a cheerful heart undaunted—that is the plan that brings a man all things he ever wanted. At finding snares and nests of mares I am not very handy; but when it comes to finding plums folks say I am a dandy; and my receipt is short and sweet, an easy one to follow; just do things right, with all your might—it beats all others hollow!

Teachers' Training School

Janesville, Wisconsin, Aug. 19, 1913.

To Friends of Education:

You will find below some letters which need no explanation. The writers have made the case clear. The longest letter, on the garden, is by a friend of the Training School, who gives an experience that was well worth while. The other letters tell the value of the Training School work, as viewed by graduates.

Here are some important facts for those who contemplate a course in the Training School:

(1) There are two courses of one and two years, respectively. (2) Residents of Rock County pay no tuition. (3) Good boarding places, can be had for $3.00 to $3.50 per week of five days. (4) All books and materials are furnished for $3.00 per year. (5) Common school graduates, 15 years old, are admitted to the two-year course without examination. (6) High School graduates can complete the course in one year, and secure a diploma good for five years. (7) Common school graduates must enter this fall in order to qualify by July 1, 1915. (8) All beginners now get $40.00 per month. (9) Students receive special training in music, drawing, calisthenics and public speaking. (10) Trained teachers are in demand at good salaries.

The Value of the Training School.

One of the chief values of the Training School is the opportunity given for a thorough review in the common branches of study, together with the best up-to-date methods of presenting them to pupils. The observation and practice work, done in the grades of the Jefferson School, are of great value, and, owing to the small number of students, and the arrangement of the classes, this work is supervised daily and all mistakes corrected. In addition to this, during the past year, each of the seniors spent two days in some country school, observing the work done one day and teaching the next. In this way experience was gained in the actual work. The rhetorical work done in the Training School teaches the students how to conduct a business meeting and enables them to prepare good programs for their own schools. The teachers keep in touch with all graduates by visiting them and constantly helping them to improve. To any person who intends to teach in a country school the training offered by this school will be of great help.

MARGARET F. FERNAN, Milton Junction.

The Value of the Training School.

The past year which I have spent in the Training School has been the most profitable of my life. Under the supervision of expert teachers, I have taken up the work which was most difficult in teaching at country school. I have learned how to conduct a recitation, how to manage a school, and also the best ways of interesting children in school life. Through the rhetorical work I have learned how to conduct a business meeting, how to prepare a program, and how to give a speech. The social side of the school has been given special attention, and this has made the school an enjoyable one. The observation and practice work has been a great aid to me in learning to teach. The teachers, who are all experienced, have been very helpful. Any person who wishes to teach should take a course in the Training School. If students who enter this school will make the most of their opportunities, they will be amply repaid, and their associations will prove a great pleasure.

NORA H. MCCARTHY, Edgerton.

The Value of the Training School.

Being intensely interested in school work, I decided to take a course in the Training School. The knowledge obtained while practicing teaching as well as from the study of the school equipment, the excellent opportunity for drill, in connection with the rhetorical and other work, will all be of practical value in teaching. The school is of very material assistance, not only before, but after graduation. The spirit of helpfulness and cooperation is shown to a marked degree by teachers, students and alumni. The location of the school is ideal. Considering the work accomplished, the pleasant association, and the continued assistance to graduates, the school is realizing the set purpose of the board and the community.

ANNA FOITON, Clinton, Wis.

The Value of the Training School.

This school is located in one of the largest towns of the county so that a person attending it has the advantages of living in a city. It is important that we have such training as this school affords as so many of the rural schools are too poorly taught. The work which is taken up has a direct bearing upon that which is to be taught, and all the subjects are practical. The small numbers enrolled increase the opportunity for drill. Each student has a certain amount of rhetorical work, so in this way the students have practice in public speaking. Each student has ten weeks' practice teaching in the grades, which is very

The Value of the Training School.

The school has excellent equipment of various kinds, among them being a kitchen with all the modern appliances, which makes it possible to prepare and serve dinner in the building. All the students are working toward the same end, and of becoming a teacher, and the spirit of the whole school is the true teacher's spirit. The graduates are aided when teaching by attending special sessions which are held at the Training School, where conferences are held and advice is given. The training which has been received in this school has been of much benefit to me.

MINNIE MILLBRANT, Janesville.

The Value of the Training School.

The two years of training which I received at the Training School, leads me to believe that I can teach a country school much more successfully than without such training. The subjects taught are practical and the thoroughness of the training, which is of great value when actually teaching. I feel that it has given me power to do independent thinking, and it has also given me more confidence in myself—an important matter. The Training School rooms are large, well heated and ventilated, which makes them very pleasant. The new kitchen, the fine stereopticon lantern, together with much other equipment, render the school a most successful and profitable place for the students. The rhetorical work, which every student must take a part in, has been of great value to me because it taught me to criticize myself as well as others. I got much practice in public speaking. The eighteen weeks of observation and practice teaching gave me an opportunity to see good teaching, and it encouraged me to try to teach as well myself.

The Training School is like a home in many respects. Everyone is treated as a friend, and the two years which I spent at this school, and I am sure I secured such power as will be of great value to me in teaching a country school.

LYDIA SOMMERFELT, Town of Fulton.

How We Got Our School Garden.

For the past two or three years I have been much interested in school gardening; especially so, since the Training School took up this work, and after learning what they did last year I decided that if possible, I would this year have a real school garden for my school. I had anticipated, although there have been many obstacles in the way. First of all, our garden plot, a part of the school ground, was very tough sod that had not been broken for many years, and which I knew could not be worked up without a team and a plow. How to accomplish this was what troubled me most, so I made known to the board of trustees, and the school board, and school garden possible, and would be greatly appreciated if one of their fathers could spare time enough from his busy life to come and plow for us. I was pleased to receive, a message from one of the fathers, saying that if I would stake out my plot, he would come and plow it for me, as soon as he finished his own plowing. But how was I to convert these words into a suitable seed bed with only one rake? For at that time they reminded me of a volcanic eruption, or at least of the waves of a stormy sea. At last an idea occurred to me. I was at that time driving to and from school and keeping the horse there all day. I had a suitable seed bed with only one rake and hitting my horse to it, two of my girls volunteered to turn the dung. They brought the horse to the training on the express wagon, a distance of three quarters of a mile, and took it home the same way.

We attempted to hitch up but found that the tugs of my driving barness were at least a foot too short. We soon lengthened them with some discarded wires which we found in a rubbish pile, and so it broke down as it was very rusty, but there was a quantity of these we received as often and went on. I have no large bags, but the method of doing it is not. The work was as new to the horse as it was to me, and I learned afterwards that the last time he had hitched to anything but a carriage before. I must admit that I felt rather timid after crossing that little plot the first time, but after starting the horse at one end and there was no such thing as stopping for until she reached the other side. Just how I got there would be impossible to describe, running, leaping, jumping. Don't think for a moment that we lacked for equipment. The children were all equipped with hammers and well they might have been. But after a few days my path began growing smoother and soon it was in fact a path for planting.

Next I plotted it out, giving to each child a plot of ten to fifteen feet. One long row back of them and running the full length of the garden was devoted to potatoes, to be planted in the school room on very stormy days next winter. Each plot or garden was to contain three rows running lengthwise. The first row was to be planted with the names of some flower, radish, and one other kind of vegetable seed, and let the children draw these seeds, and they planted in their garden what the slip called for. You will notice that each slip called for radishes, but several children did not, and I noticed when we talked of having the garden, radishes seemed to be the first thing they thought of. Second, they mature quickly and each child can use something from his garden before school closes, radishes, but the children draw these seeds, and they planted in their garden what the slip called for. You will notice that each slip called for radishes, but several children did not, and I noticed when we talked of having the garden, radishes seemed to be the first thing they thought of.

You will notice that each slip called for radishes, but several children did not, and I noticed when we talked of having the garden, radishes seemed to be the first thing they thought of.

Our next difficulty occurred soon after the little plants came up. For several meetings the teacher showed the children how to care for the plants. We had noticed numbers of gardeners about the school ground, so at once we asked them of the danger. One of the little boys brought two steel traps and we caught six of them, which rhinned them out so that they made us no more trouble.

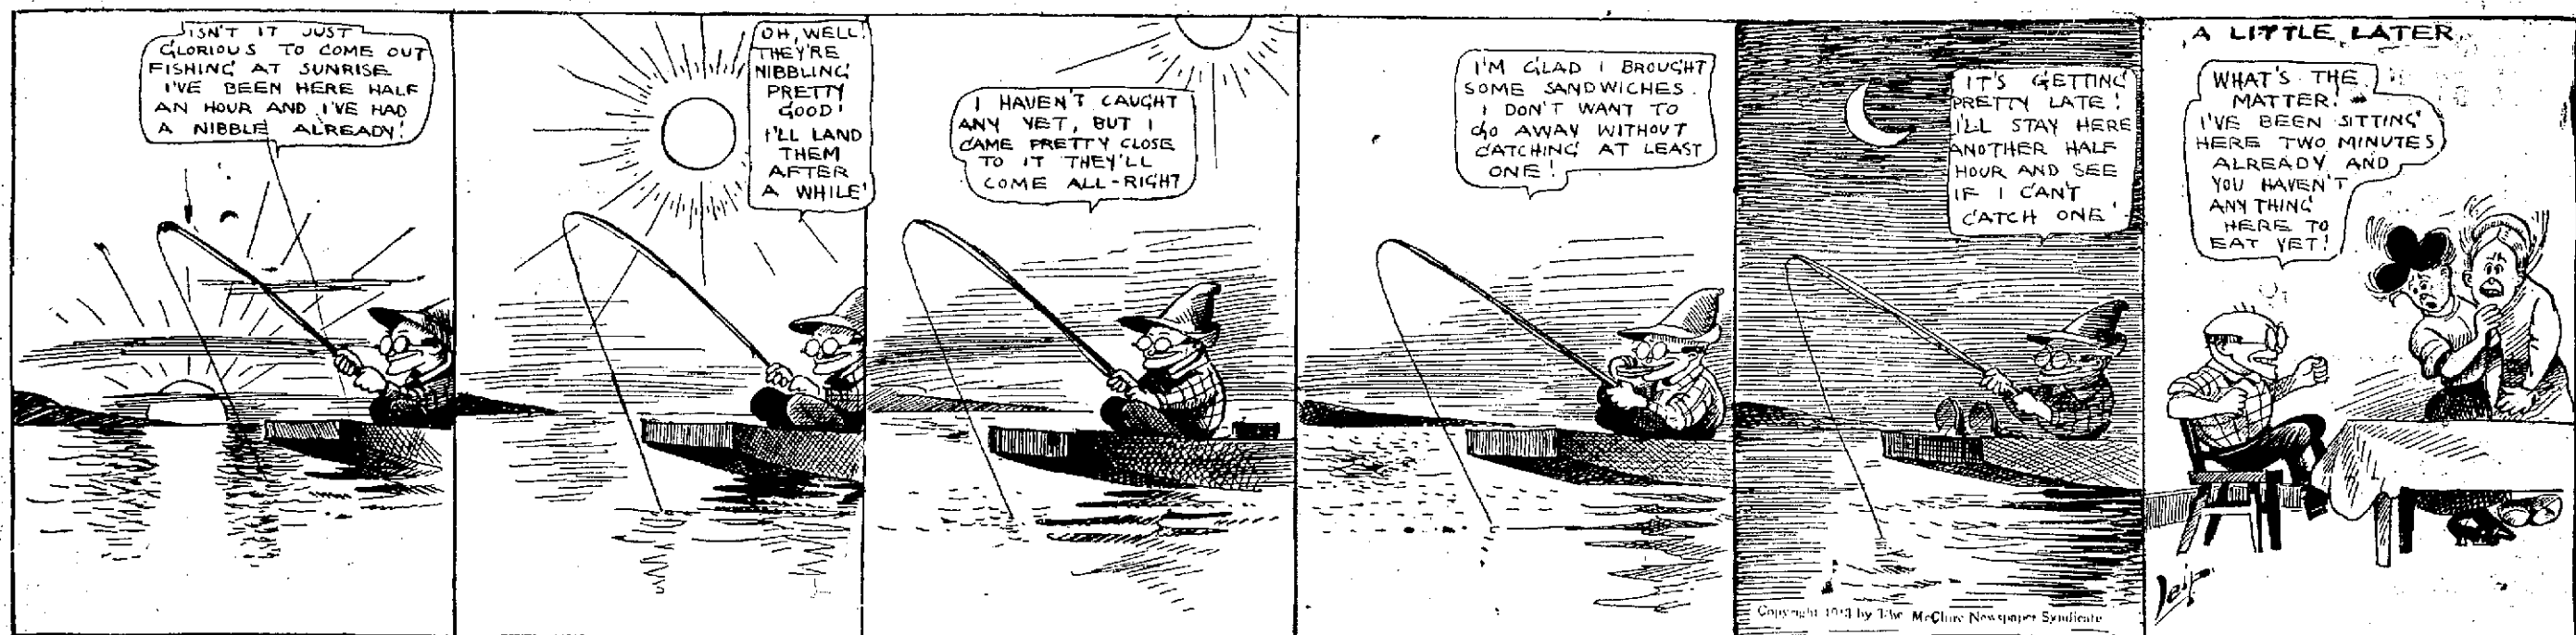

Despite the wet, backward spring we were rewarded by having onions, lettuce, and radishes ready for use before the close of the school year. We had some fine radishes and more than we could possibly use for our picnic dinner, so we gave them to the mothers. Some of them, home, as but few of them had radishes ready for use at home.

Our plans are to have a school garden several times during the summer to care for our gardens.

Now I know that school gardens make work for a teacher, and some things pertaining to them will seem almost impossible to accomplish. Yet I feel after having one that it pays. We have had a very successful year, and comfort from ours, and expect much more this fall, especially from our flower which will be at their best at that time.

I am sure the children gained much useful knowledge. I was surprised to find so many children who were unable to recognize our common garden plants as they first appear above ground, but to distinguish one kind of seed from another.

Since closing my school I have made a special trip to Janesville to visit the Training School. I was very cordially received and given a tour of the school grounds, where I saw many things which looked good to me, and one of the gardeners I saw while visiting the individual gardens of the Training School girls. There I found in fine shape and very promising and I thought as I stood

On the evening of the phenomena afore mentioned, Percy Darrow had returned to his apartments, where he had dressed unusually early, and by daylight. This was because he had a dinner engagement up-town. It was an informal engagement for a family dinner at seven o'clock, but Percy had been requested by one of the members to come at about six. This was because the other members would presumably be dressing between six and seven.

The young man found a fire blazing on the hearth, although the evening was warm. A graceful girl sat looking into the flames. She did not rise as the scientist entered, but held out her hand with an air of engaging frankness.

"Sit down," she invited the guest. "This is a fearful and wonderful time to ask you to venture abroad in your dress clothes, but I wanted to see you most particularly before the rest of the family comes down."

"You are a singularly beautiful woman," observed Darrow in a detached manner, as he disposed his long form gracefully in the opposite armchair.

The girl looked at him sharply. "That is intended as an excuse or explanation—not in the least as a compliment," Darrow went on.

"You would not be so obliging, if I were not—beautiful?" shot back the girl. "That is indeed not complimentary."

"I should be exactly as obliging," amended Darrow lazily, "but I should not feel so generally satisfied and pleased and rewarded in advance. I should have more of a feeling of virtue, and less of one of pleasure."

"I see," said the girl, her brows still level. "Then I suppose you are not interested in what I might ask you as one human being to another?"

"Pardon me, Helen," interrupted Darrow, with unusual decision. "That is just what I am interested in—you as a human being, a delicious, beautiful, feminine, human being who could mean half the created universe to a lucky man."

"But not the whole—"

"No, not the whole," mused Darrow, relaxing to his old indolent attitude. "You see," he roused himself to explain, "I am a scientist, for instance. You could not be a scientist; you have not the training."

"Nor the brains," interposed Helen Warford, a trifle bitterly.

"Nor the kind of brains," amended Darrow. "I have enough of that sort myself," he added. He leaned forward, a hunger leaping in the depths of his brown eyes. "Helen," he pleaded, "can't you see how we need each other?"

But the girl shut both her eyes, and shook her head vigorously.

"Unless people can be everything to each other, they should be nothing—people like us," said she.

Darrow sighed and leaned back. "I feel that way, but the devil of it is I can't think it," said he. Then after a pause: "What is it you want of me, Helen?"

"It's Jack," said she.

"What's the matter with Jack?"

"Everything—and nothing. He's just out of college. This fall he must go to work. Father wants him to go into an office. Jack doesn't care much, and will drift into the office unless somebody stops him."

"Well?" said Darrow.

"An office will ruin him. He isn't in the least interested in the things they do in offices; and he's too high-spirited to settle down to a grind."

"He's like you in spirit, Helen," said Darrow. "What is he interested in?"

"He's interested in you."

"What!" cried Darrow. "Wish it were a family trait."

"He thinks you are wonderful, and he knows all about all your adventures and voyages with Doctor Schermerborn. He admires the way you look and act and talk. I suspect him of trying to imitate you." Helen's eyes gleamed with amusement.

Darrow smiled his slow and languid smile.

"The last time I saw Jack he stood six feet and weighed about one hundred and eight-five pounds," he pointed out.

"The imitation is funny," admitted Helen, "but based on genuine admiration."

"What do you want me to do with him?" drawled Darrow.

"I thought you could take him in with you; get him started at something scientific; something that would interest and absorb him, and something that would not leave all his real energies free for mischief."

Darrow leaned his head against the back of the chair and laughed softly. So long did his amusement continue that Helen at length brought him father sharply to account.

"I was merely admiring," then exclaimed Darrow, "the delicious femininity of the proposal. It displays at once such really remarkable insight into the psychological needs of another human being, and such abysmal ignorance of the demands of what we are pleased to call science."

"You are the most superior and exasperating and unbecoming man I know!" cried Helen. "I am sorry I asked you. I'd like to know what there is so silly in my remarks?"

"Jack is physically very strong; he is most courageous; he has a good disposition, a gentleman's code, and an eager likable nature. I gather further that he does me the honor of admiring me personally. He has received a general, not a special, college education."

"Well!" challenged Helen.

"Barring the last, these are exactly the qualifications of a good bull-terrier."

"Oh!" cried the girl indignantly, and half rising. "You are insulting!"

"No," denied Darrow. "Not that—never to you, Helen, and you know it! I'm merely talking sense. Leaving aside the minor consideration that I am myself looking for employment, what use has a scientist for a bull-terrier? Jack has no aptitude for science; he has had none of the accurate training absolutely essential to science. He probably wouldn't be interested in science. At the moment he happens to admire me, and I'm mighty glad and proud that it is so. But that doesn't help. If I happened to be a saboteur, Jack would quite as cheerfully want to be a barkeeper. I'd do anything in the world to help Jack; but I'm not the man. You want to hunt up somebody that needs a good bull-terrier. Lots do."

"I hate such a cold-blooded way of going at things!" cried the girl. "You show no more interest in Jack than if—than if—"

Darrow smiled whimsically. "Indeed I do, Helen," he said quietly; "that is why I don't want to touch his life. Science would ruin him quicker than an office—in the long run. What he wants is a job of action—something out West—or in the construction of our great and good city. Now, if I had a political pull, instead of a scientific twist, I could land Jack in a minute. Why don't you try that?"

"Father and McCarthy are enemies," she said simply. "She arose with an air of weariness. 'How dark it's getting!' she said, and pressed the electric button in the wall."

The light did not respond.

"That's queer," she remarked, and pulled the chain that controlled the reading light on the table. That, too, failed to illuminate. "Something must be wrong with those things at the meter—what do you call them?"

"Fuses," suggested Darrow.

"Yes, that's it. I'll ring and have Blake screw in another."

Darrow was staring at a small object he had taken from his pocket. It was the electric flash-light he habitually carried to light his way up the three dark flights at his lodgings.

"Let me call him for you," he suggested, rising.

"I'll ring," said Helen.

But Darrow was already in the hall. "Blake!" he called down the basement stairway. "Bring lamps—or candles."

The man appeared on the word, carrying a lamp.

"I already had this, sir," he explained. "The lights went out some time ago."

"Did you look at the—fuses?" asked Helen.

"Yes, miss."

"Well, telephone to the electric company at once. We must have light."

Read the ads for bargains.

Percy Darrow had taken his place again in the armchair by the fire. "It is useless," said he, quietly.

"Useless!" echoed Helen. "What do you mean?" Blake stood quietly at attention.

"You will find your telephone also out of order."

Helen darted from the room, only to return after a moment, laughing.

"You are a true wizard," she said. "Tell me, how did you know? What has happened?"

"A city," stated Percy didactically, "is like a mollusk; it depends largely for its life and health on the artificial shell it has constructed. Unless I am very much mistaken, this particular mollusk is going to get a chance to try life without its shell."

"I don't understand you," said Helen.

"You will," said Percy Darrow. Mr. and Mrs. Warford descended soon after. They sat down to dinner by the light of the table candles only. Darrow hardly joined at all in the talk, but sat lost in a brown study, from which he only roused sufficiently to accept or refuse the dishes offered.

"Can't You See How We Need Each Other?"

At about eight o'clock the telephone bell clicked a single stroke, as though the circuit had been closed. At the sound Darrow started, then reached swiftly into his pocket for his little flash-light. He gravely pressed the button of this; then abruptly rose.

"I must use your telephone," said he, without apology.

He was gone barely a minute; then returned to the table with a clouded brow. Almost immediately after the company had risen from the board, he excused himself and left.

After he had assumed his coat, however, he returned for a final word with Helen.

"Where is Jack this evening?" he asked.

"Dining out with friends. Why?"

"Will you see him tonight?"

"I can if necessary."

"Do tell him to come down to my room as near eight o'clock tomorrow morning as he can. I've changed my mind."

"Oh!" cried Helen joyously. "Then you've concluded I'm right, after all?"

"No," said Darrow; "but if this thing carries out to its logical conclusion, I'm going to need a good bull-terrier pup!"

CHAPTER V.

A Scientist in Pink Silk.

The next morning promptly at eight o'clock Jack Warford, in response to a muttered invitation, burst excitedly into Percy Darrow's room. He found the scientist, draped in a pale-pink silk kimono embroidered with light-blue butterflies, scraping methodically at his face with a safety-razor. At the sight the young fellow came to an abrupt stop, as though some one had met him with a dash of cold water in the face.

"Hello!" said he, in a constrained voice. "Just up?"

Darrow cast a glance through his long silky lashes at the newcomer.

"Yes, my amiable young cousin, just up."

Jack looked somewhat puzzled at the appellation, but seated himself.

"Helen said you wanted to see me," he suggested.

Darrow leisurely cleaned the component parts of his safety-razor, washed and anointed his face, and turned.

"I do," said he, "if you're game."

"Of course I'm game!" cried the boy indignantly.

Darrow surveyed his fresh, young, eager face and the trim taut bulk of him with dispassionate eyes.

"Are you," he remarked simply,

"Possibly." But you're not the man to be sure of it."

"I didn't mean it as bragging," cried Jack, flushing.

"Surely not," drawled Darrow, stretching out his long legs. "But no man can tell whether or not he's game until he's tried out. That's no reflection on him, either. I remember once I went through seeing my best friend murdered; being shot at a dozen times myself as I climbed a cliff; seeing a pirate ship destroyed with all on board, apparently by the hand of Providence; escaping from a big volcanic burst-up into a cave, and having the cave entrance drop down shut behind me. I was as cool as a cucumber all through it. I remember congratulating myself that, anyhow, I was going to die game."

"By Jove!" murmured Jack Warford, staring at him fascinated. Evidently, the super-beautiful garment had been forgotten.

"Then a war-ship's crew rescued me; and I broke down completely and acted like a silly ass. I wasn't game at all; I'd just managed to postpone finding it out for a while."

"It was just the reaction!" cried Jack.

"Well, if that sort of reaction happens along before the trouble is all over, it looks uncommonly like loss of nerve," Percy Darrow pointed out.

"No man knows whether or not he's game," he repeated. "However," he smiled whimsically, "I imagine you're likely to postpone your reactions as well as the next."

"What's up? What do you want me to do?"

"Stick by me; obey orders," said Darrow.

"What's up?"

"Did you notice anything in the papers this morning?"

"They're full of this electrical failure last night. Haven't you seen them?"

"Not yet. While I dress, tell me what they say."

"The worst was in the tubes—"

Warford began, but Darrow interrupted him.

"I could tell you exactly what must have happened," said he, "if the failure was complete. Never mind that."

Was the condition general, or only local? How far did it extend?"

"It seemed to be confined to New York, and only about to Highbridge."

"Long Island? Jersey?"

"Yes; it hit them, too."

"What are the theories?"

"I couldn't see that they had any—that I could understand," said Jack.

"There's some talk of the influence of a comet."

"Rubbish! Who sprung that?"

"Professor Aitken, I think."

"He ought to know better. Any others?"

"I couldn't understand them all. There was one of polarizing the island because of the steel structures; and the—"

"No human agency?"

"What?"

"No man or men are suspected of bringing this about?"

"Oh, no! You don't think—"

"No, I don't think. I only imagine; and I haven't much basis for imagining. But if my imaginations come out right, we'll have plenty to do."

"Where, now?" asked Jack, as the

"I Do," He Said, "If You're Game."

scientist finished dressing and reached for his hat. "Breakfast?"

"No, I ate that before I dressed. We'll make a call on the Atlas Building."

"All right," agreed Jack cheerfully.

"What for?"

"To ask McCarthy if he hasn't a job for you in construction."

Jack came to a dead halt.

New York.—The conference committee of railroad managers is holding its meetings with members of the board of mediation and conciliation who are trying to arbitrate in the dispute between the eastern railroads and their trainmen and conductors. The members of this board, Judge William L. Chambers, Martin A. Knapp and G. W. Hanger, decided to hear first the petition of the railroads and later to receive the representatives of the employees.

W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and A. B. Garretson, head of the Order of Railroad Conductors, waited at their headquarters in a downtown hotel. They expected an opportunity to appear before the federal board as soon as the commissioners finished their conferences with the railroad managers.

The task the board faces is that of getting the parties to the controversy to agree upon steps for arbitration under the board's auspices. The hitch in the situation came with the eleventh hour proposal of the railroad managers' conference committee that grievances which the railroad companies had should be submitted to arbitration at the same time as the employees' demands are considered.

The union leaders protest against panics grievances in this sudden and unexpected manner.

the poor beast—so the outraged buyer now discovered, to his sorrow—was blind in one eye, and could see with the other only very indistinctly, if at all.

Accordingly, he wrote in righteous indignation to the dealer, passing heavy judgment on his business methods and his honesty.

Many such letters had the dealer received during his career; but this one was, to him, so quite delightful and ingenious that he designed to answer it.

"My dear sir," he wrote—"You seem to blame me for the mare's blindness. This is most unjust. The fault is not mine—nor, indeed, is it hers. On the contrary, blindness is, and always has been, her great misfortune."
